Our tax risks

Our business's internal governance has rigid levels of acceptable tax risk and given our ownership and executive management structure includes significant influence from our stakeholders.

How we manage tax risks

Barrett Steel Limited operates a system of tax risk assessment and controls as a component of the overall internal control framework applicable to the Group's financial reporting system.

Eliminating tax risks entirely is impossible, therefore the Group's attitude towards the level of control required over the processes designed to reduce tax risks is driven by the likelihood and frequency of occurrence and scale of impact of each risk.

The accounting principles of the Group operations and consequently recognition of income and costs are non-complex which reduces the level of tax risk. Year on year there are minimal changes to the operations which would have a significant tax impact.

The consistency of the chart of accounts of the individual operating locations enables strong communication and comparison of required accountancy and tax practices.

Processes relating to different taxes are allocated to appropriate process owners who review activities and controls and identify risks. These risks are monitored for business and legislative changes and processes and controls are amended as required.

Tax risk is managed through regular communication with professional advisors and compilation of detailed cost breakdowns from which the Group can assess tax implications.

The accounting functions contain qualified accounting personnel who are responsible for the accuracy and completeness of financial information. The accounting functions of the operations are supported by the head office finance function which contains suitably qualified financial staff.

The Group holds bi-annual accounting conferences, with regular content/presentations from professional advisors, to share latest accounting and tax developments. This forum also promotes discussion over current and future accounting and tax treatment, and confirms parameters set by head office.

The Group has a wider responsibility as part of the Corporate Criminal Offences legislation. The legislation is considered in the Group's Tax Risk Assessment, which is updated annually. Furthermore, relevant departments within the business receive communications relating to the legislation where needed.

Our attitude to tax planning

Our company aims for a tax compliant strategy towards financial and operational decisions. We aim to operate within all tax legislation and will seek to take advantage of agreed tax planning initiatives after consultation and advice from professional firms.

In this regard our tax planning motives are to pay the right amount of tax within legislative guidelines. We also aim for simplicity and certainty in our tax affairs wherever possible and to uphold the Group's corporate reputation.

We aim to maintain our low UK tax risk rating as assessed by HMRC.

We consult professional firms on any potential significant changes to our operations or employee matters to achieve the above aims and to take advantage of technology solutions.

Working with HMRC

We communicate regularly with our HMRC CCM to ensure that HMRC is aware of significant transactions and changes to the Group, and we seek to discuss tax issues at an early stage and resolve issues in a timely manner. We actively engage with HMRC when requested, particularly on areas relating to policy change. Key staff also regularly attend HMRC technical update seminars.

When submitting tax returns, we disclose all relevant facts and supply comprehensive information openly and honestly.
